

Re: Apex data

From : Luke Coletti <coletti@mbari.org>

Thu, Oct 11, 2012 12:29 PM

Subject : Re: Apex dataTo : Gene Massion <magene@mbari.org>Cc : Josh Plant <jplant@mbari.org>, 'Ken Johnson' <johnson@mbari.org>

Gene,

Rsync is now set to authenticate automatically, per the e-mail I sent out yesterday. Also, instead of creating another user, I actually think it would be best to i just login using the float's username and password, which are:

username: f8501

password: apex_8501

Luke

On 10/11/12 9:45 AM, Gene Massion wrote:

- > We were able to monitor the float yesterday while it said it uploaded
 - > new files to the server. However, we don't see them on ChemWebData.
 - > I'm not sure if they never made it to shore or rsync hasn't sync'ed them
 - > yet. In any event, the best solution for our current testing is get
 - > another account on your server that would allow us to see the files in
 - > the 8501 directories and make copies. We don't need write access but we
 - > do need to see what files are there and read/copy them without having to
 - > worry about any rsync issues. We're going to do some more testing
 - > tomorrow so if you can set up that account today, that would be great.
 - > An account for me like my normal MBARI account name "magene" would work
 - > fine. It would probably be good to also make an account for Josh using
 - > his normal MBARI account name which I think is "jplant".
 - >
-